

Bio-Rad launches QC online learning center

April 2024—Bio-Rad Laboratories has launched its online Quality Controls Learning Center, a free resource designed to provide laboratories with the educational resources needed to maintain quality control patient test results. The site provides a library of articles and best practices on quality control process and design, laboratory management, quality control data management, quality control troubleshooting and solutions, and the benefits of independent quality control.

The company's training and continuing education workbooks and modules as well as FAQs, videos, and technical information for a range of research areas are also accessible via this site.
