

Managing molecular information in the lab

March 17, 2016—As molecular technology and personalized medicine increasingly becomes the default position for clinical diagnostics laboratories, these modalities place significant demands on laboratory information systems. That is where molecular information management systems come into the picture.

A white paper from The Dark Report and Dark Daily examines how pathologists are using MIMS to handle the complex workflows of various molecular platforms and modalities.