

Portable blood test device, 9/14

At the AACC Show 2014

September 2014—Atomo Diagnostics introduced the AtomoRapid all-in-one blood test. It can accommodate test strips for a variety of conditions, from celiac disease and allergies to infectious diseases, such as malaria and HIV.

The device delivers clinical outcomes for patients and health care providers by enabling simple, safe, and accurate testing in the field or at home. It has been deployed in South Africa for HIV and malaria testing, and clinical activities are in process within the European Union and in planning in Asia and the U.S. The device also took the top international medical technology award in June at the Medical Design Excellence Awards in New York.
